PROGRAMME OVERVIEW

The increasingly complex nature of our roles and responsibilities in professional domain requires a new set of skills, capabilities and preparedness. Organizations today depend heavily on team work at various levels to bring a diverse set of skills and perspectives into play. An increasing number of organizations are relying on cross-functional teams, project teams, product development teams, virtual teams, self-managed teams to compete in the domestic and global markets. Hence, knowing how to lead a team effectively is a core leadership skill in the present context, and professionals with such skills are highly sought after by organizations worldwide. This program is designed to help leaders to enhance their team-building skills and learn strategies and facilitation techniques for building high-performance teams and creating effective team dynamics. This program will provide a successful team development process that facilitates the development of a new team or the revitalization of an existing team and understanding the role of teams in workplaces as well as the process that fosters teambuilding. The session aims at highlighting the challenges of working within teams, especially in terms of managing team morale and team output.
